THE DAILY MORNING CHRONICLE.
Office—CHRONICLE BUILDING,
450 Black Street, between 2 and 3 Sts.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Delivered in Washington, Georgetown, and Alexandria, Twenty Cents per week, payable to the Carriers.
Mailed to Subscribers out of the city, Three Dollars per month, or Six Dollars for three months.
Advertisements to be published in advance.
The Daily Chronicle is published for a shorter period than Three Months.
TERMS OF ADVERTISING.
Twenty Cents per line for the first insertion, and Fifteen Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Daily Morning Chronicle.

THE SUNDAY MORNING CHRONICLE.
A Large Double Sheet Paper.
Office—CHRONICLE BUILDING,
450 Black Street, between 2 and 3 Sts.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Delivered in Washington, Georgetown, and Alexandria, Twenty Cents per week, payable to the Carriers.
Mailed to Subscribers out of the city, Two Dollars per month.
A few copies remain to be sent to Subscribers and Agents and Customers.
TERMS OF ADVERTISING.
Twenty Cents per line, for the first insertion, Fifteen Dollars per year, for subsequent insertions.

VOL. II.—NO. 44.] WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 24, 1863. [FIVE CENTS.

MILLINERY.

MRS E. J. HOWELL,
414 EIGHTH STREET,
Will open a MILLINERY, Dressmaking, and Hoopskirt Establishment, on Monday, December 7, between Seventh and Eighth streets, Pennsylvania avenue and F street, Washington, Ladies' Hoopskirts of all kinds, Ladies' Dresses, Cloaks, Mantillas, Hoods, Hoopskirts, Corsets, Gloves, Hosiery, Ribbons, Flowers, Feathers, Velvets, Silks, Satins, Ladies' and Children's FANCY HATS.
Ladies' and Children's FANCY HATS.
Ladies' and Children's FANCY HATS.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1863.

D. G. FORNEY, Publisher.

UNFULFILLED REBEL PROPHECIES.

One and a half years ago, or thereabouts, a certain Walker, (we believe that was his name,) then sparkling, under the rebel Congress, the sort now known as a member of "Secession" or "Way," in a public speech, delivered a sort of prophecy to the effect that the people locally so do not remember—but generally speaking, that this was the day of Judy Gamaliel, or another, Sam Sawyer—we would be sure to find the whipping down of their slaves on Boston Common to the door of Monadnock, and that on the same day that the Stars and Stripes, "Confederate States of America" would be floating in triumph from Faneuil Hall! The prophecy remained: Our Boston correspondent to-day, however, knew nothing of it, or of either of those interesting events. The sound of the cannon, which he has not heard before, has not yet been heard in that vicinity, nor has the Union flag been known to float from any of its domes.

About the same time, or so, Wigfall, will from a United States Senator from Texas, but at latter date—a month or two, we forget, from the stupor of a heavy hotel in the city of Richmond—he prophesied that the next coming Christmas day he and a staff would be seen dining on Christmas day in the Continental, in the city of Philadelphia. Two Christmas days have passed, and, as I think it was at hand. The "left of fate" is just coming, and, we generally attentive, but we Wigfall has yet had to dine in the Continental, or any place, or of his voice or coach.

When launched into oblivion, in the raising of Gettysburg, the rebel commander Ewell was heard to say, in the public streets of that borough, that within one fortnight thereafter the rebel army would occupy Harrisburg, Lancaster, and Philadelphia, and that on the 4th of July the latter city fallen to feel the entire ire of the rebel army. Ewell, we, would on the to-day four centuries of it. Not, but he fighting, seems, not, not, not

Whitney Hall.

W. A. Fowler, Jr., Ga.
J. H. Hunter, Ga.
J. Hamilton, Ga.
J. Hamilton, Ga.
J. Hamilton

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1863.

AFTER THE CONFLICT.

BY JOSIAH G. HOLLAND.

At last the dread conflict hung over the gospel
Has passed to the West and emerging in glory,
Its ranks, all the victorious, pass with the dead over
Its
Made sacred the long-fought battle and fighting to-day.

Our chosen, dear leader! statesman! to whom we
Our
Who guided the ship through the storm and the
Who
Who gave the first blow, and who lived to the last.

He knew how to serve, and he knew how to
He knew how to strike, or wounded or spoke,
He knew how to pardon, and how to
He knew how to

He remembr more grand, darkness
Amidst the
Amidst the
Amidst the